College Urges Consideration Of New Skills

The News Reporter

With the prospect of hiring remaining at a high level in San Marcos and in San Diego County, an educator at Palomar College also is saying that 1990 is a good year for those unhappy with their jobs to do something constructive about the matter.

Since jobs can have a big effect on an individual's lifestyle, hence, his or her outlook on life, John Dise, director of the Career Center at Palomar College, maintains 1990 should be taken seriously as a milestone year for changing the career.

"Too many individuals are dissatisfied with their [current] jobs but don't want to change or learn how to find a more satisfying career," Dise said.

"My advice to them is to stop procrastinating and [to] follow a New Year's resolution in 1990 to explore the career changes they have been thinking about." Dise said that for persons already in the work force looking for a different career, the center has a support system which is designed to take the anxiety out of a change in career.

One of the beauties of the program at Palomar is that it is not restricted to those who are enrolled at the school. Other members of the San Marcos and surrounding communities are encouraged to avail themselves of it. Dise may be contacted at 744-1150, Extension 2189.

Career Change Study Urged

Continued From Page 1

Dise said that for persons already in the work force looking for a different career, the center has a support system which is designed to take the anxiety out of a change in career.

One of the beauties of the program at Palomar is that it is not restricted to those who are enrolled at the school. Other members of the San Marcos and surrounding communities are encouraged to avail themselves of it. Dise may be contacted at 744-1150, Extension 2189.