

grief
By Ruth Rice

birds let go in the night as tears to warm my cheeks
the nested memories
that kept me safe
are fledglings on the ground a childhood in broken shells

i lift the raven
to the wind
and throw her
from the roof
of my father's house

how do I mourn
all that I know?