

Anita's Tutor Strategy

1-on-1

Listen with complete attention to determine what the area of need is.

Christl's Tutor Strategy

I want to make sure I don't help the students too much. Have students explain what they have learned.

Mike's Tutor Strategy*A vision of Palomar Tutoring – PC-VISTA!

- Prepared – We come ready with strategies or know how to find them.
- Connected – We work with other departments or each other for student success.
- Visible – Students know who we are on (or off) campus and in and out of the center.
- Intuitive – We guide each session based on each individual students.
- Spirited – College students have spirit. So do we! Go Team!
- Authentic – We don't know it all because...we can't. Act accordinalv.

Be the Best That We Can Be! And Share It!

I've erected what I call our online "wall of fame" to bear witness to the success of everyone's tutoring strategies. I hope it will soon be adorned with everybody's posts and that others see them and become inspired. Just go to the "wall," double-click anywhere on it, and begin typing.

Here's the link:

<http://padlet.com/professorleeche/sz16rw7pk2gt>

(I will also put it on our web site under the "Tutors" tab and name it "Quest for the Best.")

Ashley's Tutor Strategy

- Teach students how to revise their own papers
- Listen more than speak
- Ask students questions about how they think they can fix their mistakes
- Have them read over their papers out loud. Maybe have two copies so the tutor reads it out and they can catch their mistakes.

Diego's Tutor Strategy

- Smile
- Ask for reason of appointment
- Ask for prompts or guidelines
- Be aware of the time
- "Sandwich" criticism: good feedback, criticism, good feedback
- Do not spoil students
- Stop at the right time
- Record hours daily

Siegrid's Tutor Strategy

I want to employ the tutoring strategy that pushes the students to be more self-sufficient by reviewing what they can do to help themselves – i.e. proofreading, reading essay out loud.

One-Day Learner-Centered Teaching Conference

As I mentioned at our meeting yesterday, Palomar College is once again gearing up for the next 1-Day Learner-Centered Teaching Conference, to be held this fall on Saturday, October 24th. I am seeking funds from our dean to support us attending the conference. I'll let you know if I'm successful or not. In the meantime, please check out the conference info, including about the fees, various deadlines, and a presenter's proposal, at this link:

www.palomar.edu/pages/activelearning/fall-2015-conference