

Information Literacy Leadership Summit

Help your students see through fake news to the facts

Can your students spot fake news? Stanford researchers recently found that their students could not properly evaluate online sources of information during the recent presidential campaign. How will students learn these critical skills if information literacy is not explicitly taught?

The Information Literacy Leadership Summit is designed for K-12 teacher leaders, site administrators, and district administrators to learn how to:

- Use student-centered questions to drive the research process
- Incorporate personal interests into the curriculum to foster engagement
- Create and share information to drive authentic assessment
- Evaluate the credibility of sources of information
- Promote the ethical use information with regard to plagiarism and copyright
- Take the Maker Movement and STEM to the next level

Keynote speaker Glen Warren is the director of Literacies, Outreach, and Libraries in the Encinitas Union School District. A former Orange County Teacher of the Year, he is also a nationally recognized presenter on information literacy, educational technology, and student engagement.

Information Literacy Leadership Summit

9 to 11 a.m.

Aug. 18

San Diego County Office of Education main campus

Register: <http://sdcoe.k12oms.org/900-136246>

Sept. 6

South County Regional Education Center

Register: <http://sdcoe.k12oms.org/900-136247>

Oct. 13

North County Regional Education Center

Register: <http://sdcoe.k12oms.org/900-136248>

Contact: Judy Weil
jweil@sdcoe.net
619-718-4970